Maybe it's better not to include it. I don't want to lose anything on a perceived technicality. The additional post would not be that pertinent to my decision anyway.

Yeah I saw that too. The affidavit is written on the original post only but we are looking at comments he made about the original post under other posts on his page. All of it is related so I don't think that would be a problem, but you know how these things can go. Let me know if any of that should not be included.

I'm assuming other Facebook posts made by an officer under investigation can be part of the investigative process? Nikki, if not please let us know. If so, Sgt. Mason apparently posted this remark last night.
